Bamburgh Castle

With more castles than any other county in England, Northumberland is a fascinating place, deep rooted in history.

From the ancient walled border town of Berwick upon Tweed, the Gold Tier dark skies of Kielder deep in the National Park, ancient Roman towns and villages dotted along Hadrian's Wall and not forgetting the home of Hogwarts, Alnwick Castle in the historic market town.

A rich and varied heritage of art, music, and artisans allows for some of the country's finest food producers, most creative of chefs and most passionate creators offering market produce, exciting eateries, and unique shopping.

It's also a magnificent coastal county too, with 39 miles of unspoilt coast designated an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. The charming villages and towns dotted along the coast offer the very best for those looking to take life at a gentler pace surrounded by spectacular views, amazing wildlife, unspoilt beaches and stunning walking and cycling routes.

A place with an historic past

Like the rest of the county of Northumberland, Beadnell has a fascinating history. One of the first references is that in the 7th century, King Oswald of Northumbria built a chapel here for his sister St Ebba, the Abbess of Coldingham.

Today, the historic village church is also dedicated to St Ebba having thought to have replaced the chapel in 1740 and later rebuilt in the mid nineteenth century.

To the east of Beadnell harbour are 3 lime kilns, the earliest of which was built in 1789. Here, limestone was burnt using local coal to make quicklime, a component in building mortar and for use as a fertilizer. Much of Beadnell's lime was transported by ship for use in Scotland. However, by 1822, the kilns became uneconomic and were taken over by local fisherman for curing herring. Today, the limekilns are Grade II listed and used to store lobster pots.

With a tranquil East coast location, Beadnell Bay was a potential landing site for a German invasion force during World War II - especially after the invasion of Norway in 1940. Like the rest of the East coast, it was defended by a 'coastal crust' which included pillboxes, concrete anti-tank blocks and trenches.

THE KILNS BEADNELL

Few pill boxes survive but one remains in Beadnell. Once manned by up to 6 soldiers, it has the name 'Farne Hotel' scratched over the door – a well-known watering hole in nearby Seahouses!

Fascinating heritage assets including lime kiln, pill box and the World War trenches are all onsite at The Kilns.

A series of anti-tank blocks, some in situ and others likely moved, still form a line down the beaches next to Beadnell.

All of this easily comes to life when taking an evening stroll with the sounds of the waves and birds and the bustle of the fishermen getting ready.
